Introduction

It gives me great pleasure as Chairman of the Select Committee on Constitutional Amendment Bills to present the Committee's Report to Parliament.

The Committee has held 30 meetings to consider and debate the matters referred to it, and has worked more intensively than any other Committee in Nauru's parliamentary history. It is apt that this should be so, as this Committee was charged with the great responsibility of considering two bills to amend the supreme law of Nauru, the 1968 Constitution. All members of the Committee have shown the appropriate dedication to this important task, and after lengthy debate have agreed on the recommendations contained in this Report.

After the initial administrative meetings of the Committee that were devoted to producing a work schedule and agenda, all subsequent meetings of the Committee at which proposed constitutional amendments were debated were held in the Parliamentary Chamber and aired live on the radio. The gallery was open to the public during these Committee meetings, and the meetings were also recorded so that verbatim transcripts could be produced for the historical record.

Because of the significance of the proposed amendments to the Constitution that formed the subject matter of this Committee's work, the Committee hopes that this Report will reach a wide audience, and we have therefore tried to draft this Report with a readership of both Parliament and the public in mind. For this reason, section A of Part 1 of the Report explains the constitutional review process and how the work of this Committee fits into that process.

The Committee has also included appendices to this Report which we hope will not only assist members of Parliament during the debates of the Committee of the Whole on the constitutional amendment Bills, but will also serve as a useful reference guide for members of the public who wish to have an overview of this Committee's recommendations, and how they compare to public opinion, the recommendations of the Constitutional Review Commission and the resolutions of the Constitutional Convention. Thus, Appendix 1 to this Report is a comparative table which shows the history of each proposed amendment, and Appendix 2 shows the existing Constitution of Nauru with the recommended amendments of this Committee marked in the text. This enables readers to see what the Constitution would look like if all of the recommendations of this Committee were ultimately adopted.

This Report and its appendices reflect the resolutions that were passed by the Committee. Whilst most resolutions were passed unanimously, sometimes the members of the Committee held different opinions on particular proposed amendments. The healthy debate between members of the Committee has been seen as a positive thing by members of the Committee and the public alike. But it must be noted that this Report therefore differs in one important respect from ordinary Committee Reports: and that is, that whilst all nine members of this Committee have agreed to adopt this Report and to put their name to it, each member reserves the right to express a view that may differ from a resolution of the Committee contained in this Report when Parliament forms itself into the Committee of the Whole later this year. In signing this Report, members are acknowledging that the Report accurately reflects the resolutions that were passed by the majority of the Committee, but they are not committing themselves to agree with every resolution contained in the Report when they come to debate in the Committee of the Whole.

One other aspect of this Report deserves mention, and that is that the minutes of the Committee's meetings and the verbatim transcripts of the meetings are not appended to this Report, because they are too voluminous. However, the minutes and the transcripts are public documents and will be made available to any interested member of the public upon request. Members of the public may read a hard copy of the minutes and the transcripts within the Parliament building, or may obtain an electronic copy of the minutes and the transcripts on disk, by requesting them from Katy Le Roy or Jennie Reiyetsi from Friday 13th March onwards.

This Committee was ably assisted in its work by two legal advisors: Mr Gerard Winter of New Zealand, who served the Committee as UNDP legal consultant, and Ms Katy Le Roy, Nauru's Parliamentary Counsel and also Secretary and legal advisor to the Committee. The Committee is grateful to the UNDP and the UNDEF for its generous financial assistance to the constitutional review process in Nauru, and in particular for providing this Committee with the services of the UNDP legal consultant. The Committee also gratefully acknowledges the assistance of all those who, at the request of the Committee, provided input and feedback to the Committee on particular provisions of the Constitution, and whose assistance is detailed in section A of Part 2 of this Report.

The Secretariat staff within Parliament have worked extremely long hours during the term of this Committee, and have produced outstanding work. On behalf of the Committee I wish to express our gratitude for the hard work and dedication of the Parliament staff in providing support to this Committee, especially to the Clerk of Parliament Frederick Cain, Jennie Reiyetsi, Sukie Adeang, Charity Kamtaura, Magra Garoa, Lucy Detabouw, Nissa Peo and Francilia Akubor. The Committee is also grateful to the staff of the Nauru Media Bureau, who have worked long hours alongside the Committee in order to ensure that the meetings could be aired on radio and that all proceedings were recorded, and we extend our thanks to them for their hard work.

I also wish to thank the members of the Committee for the manner in which they have approached their task: with thorough preparation, careful thought, a generous commitment of time and energy and a constructive and cooperative spirit.

Part 1 – Background

A. Constitutional review process

Overview of the process

The constitutional review process was started by the Scotty government in 2006, because the government believed that there were some inadequacies in the Constitution which had contributed in part to some of Nauru's political and financial problems over recent decades, and that the system of government and government accountability might be improved by making certain amendments to the Constitution. The constitutional review process in Nauru was designed to include six steps:

The first step involved raising public awareness about the Constitution and about the existence of the review, and took place in July and August 2006.

In step two, there was a series of forty public consultation meetings around the island over about five weeks, to provide people with more detailed information on the Constitution and some options for amendment, and to get people's opinions on whether or not they think the Constitution should be changed, and what sort of changes they would like to see. Over 700 people participated in those meetings, and 40 written submissions were received from the public during that step. The second step was completed in November 2006.

The third step in the process involved the establishment of an independent Constitutional Review Commission which took account of all the views of the public and made a series of recommendations for amendment to the Constitution. The Constitutional Review Commission submitted its report at the end of February 2007.

Following the Commission, a Constitutional Convention was held over six weeks in April and May 2007 to debate the recommendations of the Commission. The Convention comprised 36 members, 18 of whom were directly elected by the public, and 18 of whom were appointed by the Standing Committee on Constitutional Review (CRC) – including the 9 members of the CRC and 9 representatives of youth, women, churches, disabled persons, and the 1968 Constitutional Convention. The Convention was the fourth step.

The constitutional review process has now reached step 5, which is the consideration of constitutional amendment bills by Parliament.

Step 6 will be a referendum, to ask the public whether they approve of some of the proposed amendments.

To summarise the process:

- Step 1 was public awareness
- Step 2 was public consultation
- Step 3 was the Constitutional Review Commission
- Step 4 was the Constitutional Convention

Step 5 is consideration by Parliament, which includes the work of this Committee; and
Step 6 will be a referendum

Step 5 – Parliament considers constitutional amendments

During step 5, Parliament is considering two draft bills to amend the Constitution. In accordance with the Constitutional Convention Act 2007, the constitutional amendment bills that have been introduced to Parliament for its consideration have to reflect the motions passed by the Convention. The two bills for constitutional amendment that came out of the Convention were originally introduced to Parliament in June 2007, but then the bills lapsed when Parliament was dissolved in August 2007. Those bills were later reintroduced to Parliament, on 25 November 2008.

Bills to amend the Constitution are different to ordinary bills or ordinary legislation, and they must therefore be passed in accordance with a special procedure which is spelled out in Article 84 of the Constitution. Under Article 84 of the Constitution of Nauru, a bill to amend the Constitution not only needs to be passed by at least twelve of the eighteen members of Parliament instead of just a simple majority, but it must also sit in Parliament for at least 90 days between the day it is first introduced and the day it is passed. The reason Article 84 requires more than a simple majority and also requires the 90 day waiting period is to make sure that any suggested changes to the Constitution are widely supported, and that they cannot be passed in a rush without proper consideration.

In December 2008, approximately three weeks after the bills were reintroduced, Parliament passed a motion to establish this Select Committee. Parliament decided to establish the Select Committee, instead of going straight into the Committee of the Whole, because of the importance and complexity of these bills, and because Parliament wanted a special committee to consider all of the relevant material from the constitutional review process so far, and whether in view of all of the relevant material it would be a good idea to make any amendments to the bills. The terms of reference of this Committee are set out in section C of Part 1 of this Report.

Parliament created this Select Committee, notwithstanding that Parliament already had a Standing Committee on Constitutional Review, known as the CRC, because under the Standing Orders of Parliament, bills cannot be referred to a Standing Committee, like the CRC, but only to a Select Committee. The members of this Select Committee are the same nine people that are members of the CRC, but are sitting under a new title because of the particular task that has been referred to the Select Committee and because of the rules contained in the Standing Orders.

The two bills for proposed constitutional amendment have been referred by Parliament to this Select Committee, and the task of this Committee has been to look in detail at the bills and consider whether to recommend any amendments to the bills in this Report to Parliament.

It is important to emphasise that Parliament is not bound by the decisions of the Convention. Of course, Parliament will have to have regard to what the Convention decided, but Parliament also has the authority to make changes to the bills if it decides that it is necessary. This is because Parliament is the authority ultimately responsible for representing the people and for law-making, and because Article 84 of the Constitution provides that Parliament may, via a special procedure, pass amendments to the Constitution. That is why it is possible for this Committee to make recommendations to Parliament that are sometimes different to what the Convention resolved. People who have been following the debates of this Select Committee on the radio will know that in many instances, this Committee has endorsed the resolutions of the Convention. But on some issues, after thoughtful consideration and debate, and having stated its reasons in a public forum, this Committee has made recommendations that differ from what the Convention resolved. Appendix 1 to this Report contains a comparative table which shows for each Article or proposed new Article of the Constitution what was recommended by the Commission, what was resolved by the Convention, and what was resolved by this Committee.

It is important to clarify that this Select Committee cannot make decisions on behalf of the whole Parliament. The resolutions in relation to proposed constitutional amendments that have been adopted by this Committee are by no means final decisions of Parliament, but rather they are decisions to make particular recommendations to Parliament in this Report.

Parliament will sit later this year, probably in June, as a ‘Committee of the Whole’ to consider this Report and to consider the bills clause by clause. The Committee of the Whole includes every member of Parliament, all sitting together as a Committee to consider the details of proposed legislation. Once the Committee of the Whole has gone through this Select Committee Report and through every clause of the bills, and decided on the final content of the bills, Parliament will be ready to vote on passing the bills. If the bills are passed by Parliament, by at least 12 members, that will be the end of step 5 of the constitutional review process.

Step 6 – Referendum

Article 84 of the Constitution, in addition to creating a special procedure for Parliament to pass any changes to the Constitution, also says that some of the most important Articles of the Constitution cannot be changed by Parliament alone, but also require the approval of two thirds of the votes cast in a referendum. A referendum is a special vote on questions about the Constitution and whether it should be changed, and anyone who is entitled to vote in a general election can also vote in a referendum

If the constitutional amendment bills are passed by Parliament in 2009, a referendum will be held to ask the people of Nauru whether they approve of some of the proposed constitutional amendments. People will be given the information they need to make an informed choice as to whether or not they approve of those of the proposed changes that require approval by a referendum.

People will be asked to vote only on some of the constitutional amendments, not all of them, because Article 84 only requires a referendum for any changes that are proposed to specific Articles of the Constitution. The Articles that require the approval of a referendum before they can be changed are those Articles which are listed in Schedule 5 of the Constitution, and which are regarded as the most important Articles of the Constitution, such as the way the President is elected, some of the finance Articles, human rights provisions and others.

If the changes submitted to a referendum do not win the support of at least two thirds of all the votes cast in that referendum, then those changes will not be passed and will not take effect. Even if Parliament has passed them by two thirds of Parliament, without the additional support of the public in the referendum, any changes to the important Articles listed in schedule 5 will not be passed into law.

B. Constitutional amendment Bills

History of the bills

The two constitutional amendment bills that were introduced to Parliament on 25 November 2008 are the Constitution of Nauru (Parliamentary Amendments) Bill 2008 and the Constitution of Nauru (Referendum Amendments) Bills 2008. The constitutional amendment bills in their current form contain only the proposed amendments endorsed by the Constitutional Convention. The job of this Select Committee was to consider in detail the bills and other material that was referred to it, and to make recommendations about whether anything in the bills should be changed or added.

These bills are not government bills, and they are not bills that were put together or endorsed by the Standing Committee on Constitutional Review, the CRC, but rather they are bills that were introduced to Parliament pursuant to section 15 of the Constitutional Convention Act 2007. Section 15 of that Act required the Convention to produce a Report, with a draft bill to amend the Constitution in accordance with the resolutions of the Convention, as an appendix to the Report. The Chairman of the Constitutional Convention duly submitted the Report of the Convention and a draft bill to the Speaker and to the former Chairman of CRC, Hon Mathew Batsiua, on Friday 1 June 2007.

Why are there two separate bills?

Since that Report was tabled in Parliament, the title and format of the bill that was appended to the Report have been changed to reflect the procedural requirements that relate to specific proposals for amendment that came out of the Convention, but the substance and wording of the constitutional amendments proposed by the resolutions of the Convention have not been changed in any way. They have been divided into two separate and interrelated bills, to be considered together, merely to reflect the fact that the various proposals fall into two different procedural categories. Some proposals relate to Articles of the Constitution that can be amended by Parliament alone, other proposals relate to Articles of the Constitution that can only be amended by Parliament and a referendum.

Proposed amendments to constitutional provisions that are not listed in Schedule 5 to the Constitution can be amended by Parliament alone, complying with the requirements of Article 84, are contained the first of the two bills, called the Constitution of Nauru (Parliamentary Amendments) Bill 2008. The second category of proposed amendments are those to change Articles listed in Schedule 5 to the Constitution, which require the approval of Parliament and a referendum, in accordance with Article 84 of the Constitution. These proposed amendments are contained in the second of the two bills, the Constitution of Nauru (Referendum Amendments) Bill 2008.

Amendment of the bills by Parliament

As highlighted in section A, above, before taking a final vote on the bills, Parliament has the authority to make changes to the bills if it decides that it is necessary. This is because Parliament is the authority ultimately responsible for representing the people and for law-making, and because Article 84 of the Constitution provides that Parliament may, via a special procedure, pass amendments to the Constitution. This Committee was required by its terms of reference, which are detailed in section C of this Part, below, to consider whether it is necessary or desirable to make any amendments to the constitutional amendment bills, and whether the constitutional amendment bills, including any amendments and insertions proposed by this Select Committee, are legally sound and what the likely impact of each of the proposed amendments to the Constitution will be. After lengthy consideration and debate, this Committee found that it is desirable, and in some cases necessary, to make amendments to the bills, and the Committee's findings and recommendations in this regard are set out in Part 3 of this Report.

Transitional provisions

The two bills that were introduced to Parliament and referred to this Committee do not yet contain the transitional provisions that would be necessary to regulate the manner in which the proposed amendments would come into effect. This Committee was also tasked with examining the question of what needs to be inserted in the constitutional amendment bills by way of transitional provisions, based on the proposed final form of the bills as recommended by the Select Committee. This Report contains some observations about the type of transitional provisions that would be required if the recommendations of this Select Committee were to be adopted, but the Committee recommends that the precise wording of the proposed transitional provisions be drafted during the Committee of the Whole stage, when it becomes apparent what the final content of the constitutional amendment bills will be.

C. Committee's terms of reference

This Committee was established by a resolution of Parliament on 18 December 2008. The motion to establish the Select Committee prescribed the Committee's terms of reference, and some of the procedural rules governing the Select Committee. The motion that was passed to establish the Select Committee, read as follows:

“Motion to establish a Select Committee on Constitutional Amendment Bills:

- (1) That pursuant to Standing Order 163, the House resolves to refer the Constitution of Nauru (Parliamentary Amendments) Bill 2008 and the Constitution of Nauru (Referendum Amendments) Bill 2008 (“the constitutional amendment bills”) to a Select Committee, to be known as the Select Committee on Constitutional Amendment Bills, and that such Committee be established to inquire into and report to the House, on or before 16 February 2009, on the provisions of the constitutional amendment bills and other matters referred to the Committee in paragraph (5) of this motion.
- (2) That the Committee consist of nine Members, namely:

- (8) That the Committee may hold closed meetings from which all strangers are excluded, but that wherever practicable the Committee shall hold its meetings in public
- (9) That the first meeting of the Committee shall be held on Monday 5 January 2009 at 10:00am.”

On 5 February 2009, a further motion was passed by Parliament to extend the reporting date of the Select Committee to 27 March 2009.

Part 2 – Deliberations of the Committee

A. Materials before the Committee

The Select Committee was required by its terms of reference to have regard to certain materials that were relevant to its inquiry. The materials specifically referred to the Committee, as set out in section C of Part 1, above, were:

- a) The Report of the Nauru Constitutional Review Commission, 28 February 2007;
- b) The Report of the Nauru Constitutional Convention, May 2007;
- c) The table of public views on proposed constitutional amendments that was prepared for the use of the Constitutional Review Commission;
- d) The advice of any legal advisor/s whose services may be made available to the Committee;
- e) Any material of the Standing Committee on Constitutional Review that the Committee deems useful to its inquiry;
- f) Any other material that the Committee deems relevant to its inquiry.

The Secretary to the Committee provided all members of the Committee with a copy of the Commission Report ('Naero Ituga' Report, 28 February 2007), the Convention Report and the table of public views (these being the documents listed at a), b), and c), above), as well as with the two constitutional amendment bills and the second reading speeches for each bill, during the first week of the Committee's meetings in January 2009.

Other material of the Standing Committee on Constitutional Review (CRC) which was deemed to be useful to this Committee's inquiry (see paragraph e), above) and which was provided to all members was the Report on Public Consultations prepared by the two UNDP consultants who conducted the public consultation meetings (Report dated 22 November 2006).

The Committee also consulted with persons outside the Committee in relation to particular Articles of the Constitution. Charmaine Rodrigues of the UNDP Pacific Centre provided input on proposed Article 13B relating to the right to information prior to that proposed Article being debated and adopted by the Committee. Adrian Chippindale, Belinda Robilliard and Winston Rodrigues of the Department of Finance provided input on the draft finance provisions, prior to those provisions being debated by the Committee. The Chairman of the Nauru Phosphate Royalties Trust, Leo Keke, and the trust's legal advisor Anne MacNamara of HDY lawyers provided feedback on the proposed amendment to Article 63 after it had been adopted. And Professor Christina Murray of the University of Capetown and Professor Philip Stenning of Keele University in England provided input on Article 70A relating to the Director of Public Prosecutions prior to that Article being adopted by the Committee.

At the request of members of the Committee, the Secretary to the Committee prepared a comparative table, showing in columns side-by-side the existing provisions of the Constitution of Nauru, the public opinion on various provisions as gathered during step 2 of the constitutional review process, the recommendations of the Constitutional Review Commission on each Article, the resolutions of the Constitutional Convention on each Article, and notes highlighting the interrelationship between various Articles of the Constitution (material provided by virtue of paragraph f), above). This comparative table was used by members as a quick reference guide to ascertain the history of each proposed amendment, and to ascertain how different provisions of the Constitution are linked – which is important for understanding the ramifications of proposing changes to particular provisions in terms of the effect that will have on other provisions and the potential need to make consequential amendments to other provisions as a result of amending one particular Article.

The advice of the two legal advisors to the Committee generally took the form of verbal advice during meetings of the Committee, although some additional written material was provided to members by the legal advisors, including comparative material from other jurisdictions in instances where members had requested information on how particular questions are dealt with in other places, and documents prepared by the legal advisors in relation to particular Articles, such as documents that showed a side-by-side comparison of an existing provision of the Constitution, the amendment to that provision recommended by the Commission, and the resolution on that provision made by the Convention and reflected in one of the constitutional amendment bills.

Some of the material used by the Committee was projected onto a screen during Committee meetings so that on any particular point of discussion members could readily see the relevant parts of each document in quick succession.

Members were also provided by the legal advisors with a daily briefing sheet, which usually included the relevant sections of the comparative table relating to the day's agenda items, and sometimes additional material relevant to the day's agenda items.

When the Committee had made resolutions in respect of each provision and proposed new provision of the Constitution, the legal advisors prepared version 1 of Appendix 2 to this Report, which reflected all the resolutions of the Committee, and which made recommendations for minor consequential amendments in order to ensure that the recommendations sat cohesively together and that the language used throughout the draft amended Constitution was consistent. Members considered and voted on each of the proposed consequential amendments, and by doing so produced the document that is now Appendix 2 to this Report.

The members of the Committee familiarised themselves thoroughly with all of the materials detailed above in preparation for the Committee's debates on the proposed constitutional amendments.

B. Legal advice to the Committee

During the first four meetings of the Committee, which were held in camera to deal with administrative matters such as planning the Committee's timetable of work and determining the Committee's agenda, the Committee was assisted by Parliamentary Counsel who is also Secretary to the Committee.

From the fifth meeting of the Committee on Monday 19th January to the fourteenth meeting of the Committee held on Friday 30th January, the Committee was advised by the UNDP consultant legal advisor Mr Gerard Winter.

From the fifteenth meeting of the Committee on Tuesday 17th February to the twenty-seventh meeting of the Committee held on Thursday 5th March, the Committee was advised by both Parliamentary Counsel and the UNDP consultant legal advisor Gerard Winter.

From the twenty-eighth meeting of the Committee on Friday 6th March to the thirtieth meeting of the Committee on Monday 9th March, the Committee was advised by Parliamentary Counsel.

The approach taken by the two legal advisors to the Committee was to provide a short daily briefing sheet to all members, which noted in respect of each Article on the agenda whether the amendments proposed in the bills were legally sound and whether it was necessary to consider the interconnectedness of any Article on the daily agenda with other Articles. The legal advisors generally provided a short verbal introduction to the debate on each agenda item, restricting the introduction to a brief history of each proposed amendment, and on occasion to the rationale behind certain proposed amendments where such rationale was evident from the Commission Report of from the debates of the Constitutional Convention. The Chairman then opened the floor for debate by members of the Committee.

The primary task of the legal advisors was to respond to legal questions posed by members of the Committee, and to draft any amendments proposed by members of the Committee.

C. Meetings of the Committee

The Select Committee on Constitutional Amendment Bills held thirty meetings to consider the matters referred to it and to prepare its report. The first meeting of the Committee was held on Monday 5th January 2009 in accordance with the directive contained in the motion that established the Committee. The Committee met further on the 8th, 13th and 16th January in the Committee Room, Parliament House, to deal with administrative matters such as planning the Committee's timetable of meetings and setting the Committee's agenda.

The Committee resolved during the course of its first four meetings that it would be necessary to hold intensive daily sittings for a period of several weeks in order to complete its inquiry on the matters referred to it within the prescribed timeframe, and also in order to maximise the use of the consultant legal counsel during his two visits to Nauru. The Committee therefore decided that for the two week period from 19th January to 30th January it would meet every week day from 2:00pm to 6:00pm, and that for the three week period from 17th February to 9th March it would also meet every week day from 2:00pm to 6:00pm.

Meetings were scheduled for the afternoons rather than for full days in part so that there was sufficient time for the legal advisors to prepare briefings and to attend to any matters referred to them by members at previous meetings, and in part because four members of the Committee are Cabinet Ministers with workloads that preclude them from attending daily meetings that take up the whole day. In the event, meetings seldom finished at the scheduled finishing time of 6:00pm, but routinely concluded somewhere between 8:00pm and 10:00pm.

The Committee also resolved to make its meetings open to the public from the 5th meeting onwards, which is when the Committee began the task of debating proposed constitutional amendments. Committee meetings were therefore held in the Parliamentary Chamber, and the public gallery was open to the public. Meetings were aired live on radio, and were also recorded so that verbatim transcripts could be prepared for the historical record.

The Committee resolved at its third meeting to divide the items on its agenda (all constitutional provisions and all proposed amendments to the Constitution) into different categories, which were dealt with in the following order:

1. Articles to which no amendment is proposed, and Articles on which the amendment recommended by the Commission was approved by the Convention without amendment (easy category);
2. Articles on which the amendment recommended by the Commission was approved by the Convention with further amendments (medium category);
3. Articles on which the amendment recommended by the Commission was rejected by the Convention, and Articles where the Convention initiated their own proposed amendment not contemplated by the Commission (hard category); and
4. Transitional provisions: which can only be considered and reported on when it is clear what the complete package of proposed amendments will be (last category)

It is for this reason that the Committee did not consider the provisions of the Constitution in sequential order. Some revisions were made to the agenda during the course of the Committee's meetings, either because the time allocated for each item on the original agenda proved to be inadequate or because some items were deferred to be considered together with related Articles that appeared at a later date on the agenda.

All meetings were presided over by the Chairman or the Deputy Chairman, and all debate and discussion was moderated through the Chair. All meetings were commenced and concluded with prayers. The Committee adhered to the standard procedures of Select Committees. This means that the Chairman had only a casting vote, and that the records of proceedings included every motion moved and the names of the mover and seconder, and, where a vote was not unanimous, the names of those voting in the affirmative and the negative were recorded.

Minutes of the meetings of the Committee were taken by the Clerk of Parliament and by the Deputy Secretary to the Committee. The Committee also had the assistance of two legal advisors, as detailed in section B of this Part of the Report, above. The staff of the Parliament Secretariat prepared verbatim transcripts of the meetings of the Committee from the tape recordings of the Committee Meetings.

One copy of the minutes of the meetings of the Select Committee is to be presented to Parliament together with this Report in accordance with Standing Order 217. Yet, as noted in the Introduction to this Report, the minutes of the Committee's meetings and the verbatim transcripts of the meetings are not appended to this Report, because they are too voluminous. However, the minutes and the transcripts are public documents and will be made available to any interested member of the public upon request. Members of the public may read a hard copy of the minutes and the transcripts within the Parliament building, or may obtain an electronic copy of the minutes and the transcripts on disk, by requesting them from Katy Le Roy or Jennie Reiyetsi from Friday 13th March onwards.

Part 3 – Findings and recommendations

A. Summary of inquiry and findings

Taking its terms of reference into account, the Committee resolved to conduct its inquiry by considering every Article of the existing Constitution, every recommendation of the Constitutional Review Commission, and every provision of the draft bills (which contain the resolutions of the Constitutional Convention). In considering these items, the Committee had to take into account all of the materials referred to it.

The manner in which the Committee devised its agenda is detailed in section C of Part 2, above. When considering each item, the Committee had regard to the existing provision (if any) in the Constitution, the reasoning behind any proposed amendments (if any) to the existing provision, and the likely impact of each of the proposed amendments. In considering the likely impact of proposed amendments, members of the Committee attempted to foresee how each of the proposed amendments would work in practice, and whether each proposed amendment would be likely to improve the existing system, as well as whether there might be any negative consequences attached to proposed amendments, or any unintended scope for abusing, twisting or escaping certain constitutional rules.

Another aspect of considering the impact of proposed amendments and whether they were legally sound was the consideration of how each of the Articles in the Constitution (and proposed new Articles) is interrelated with others. Thus for example, if Article 34(1) is amended to provide that the Speaker is someone who is not a member of Parliament, this change alone would necessitate consequential amendments to Articles 16(3), 32(1)(c), 34(2) and 34(3)(b) and (c), 43(2) and 46(2). The Committee has therefore endeavoured in its recommendations to ensure that all recommendations fit together, and that all necessary interrelated amendments have been taken into account.

In summary, the Select Committee found that the recommendations of the Commission and the resolutions of the Convention were mostly sound, and in many cases, particularly in cases where the Convention adopted the recommendation of the Commission in respect of a particular proposed amendment, the Committee has resolved to adopt the same resolution as the Convention. In some cases however, after careful consideration and detailed debate, the Select Committee has passed resolutions that differ from the recommendations of the Commission and/or the resolutions of the Convention. The reasoning behind each of the Committee's resolutions is summarised in section B of this Part of the Report, below, and in Appendix 1 to this Report, and is detailed in the transcripts of the Committee's deliberations, which are publicly accessible.

The Committee found that in a handful of cases, amendments to the Commission recommendations as passed by the Convention were not legally tenable, were drafted in a manner not consistent with the rest of the Constitution, or were unnecessary (in some cases being matters that would be non-justiciable, or that were more properly left to policy and legislation rather than being suitable for inclusion in the Constitution). In a handful of cases also the Committee has recommended proposed amendments to the Constitution that are derived neither from the Commission recommendations nor from the Convention resolutions, but were proposed by the Committee itself (see for example Art 58A in Appendix 2).

B. Recommendations of the Committee in relation to the Bills

The Committee recommends that certain amendments to the constitutional amendment bills should be made by the Committee of the Whole before the bills are voted on by Parliament. In addressing its terms of reference in accordance with paragraph (5) of the motion that established the Committee, the Committee's recommendations can be summarised as follows:

a) is it necessary or desirable to make any amendments to the constitutional amendment bills?

Yes. The Committee proposes a number of amendments to the constitutional amendment bills, which are detailed in Appendix 3 to this Report. The resolutions of the Committee in relation to each Article are outlined in Appendix 1, and the Constitution as it would appear if all of the Committee's recommendations were adopted is set out in Appendix 2.

b) are any of the recommendations of the Constitutional Review Commission that were rejected by the Constitutional Convention of 2007 so soundly based and/or so strongly supported by public opinion that they ought to be inserted into the constitutional amendment bills?

Yes. The Committee found that a number of the Commission recommendations that were rejected by the Convention were either so soundly based or so strongly supported by public opinion (or in some cases both) that they ought to be inserted into the constitutional amendment bills.

Of particular note in this respect are the recommendation of the Commission that the President should be popularly elected by the people, which the Committee felt was so strongly supported by the public and would be such a significant enhancement of Nauru's democratic system, that it ought to be included in the bills. The Committee notes that the popular election of the President is one of the proposed amendments that requires approval by popular referendum, so it would only be passed if the people vote overwhelmingly in favour of it.

Similarly, the Committee found that the Commission's recommendations that the Speaker be a non-member, and that Article 24 concerning motions of no confidence be amended to restrict the frequent and frivolous use of such motions, were very soundly based, were designed to address some of the constitutional problems that precipitated the constitutional review, and were supported by the public. Accordingly, the Committee recommended that these proposed amendments ought to be inserted into the bills, although the Committee also recommended some minor modifications to the wording proposed by the Commission.

There are other instances in which the Committee recommends that the Commission recommendations rejected by the Convention ought to be adopted, and these can be readily found (and compared alongside what the Commission recommended and what the Convention resolved) in Appendix 1 to this Report.

c) are the constitutional amendment bills, including any amendments and insertions proposed by the Select Committee, legally sound and what is the likely impact of the proposed amendments?

The Committee found that in their current form, the constitutional amendment bills contain a handful of clauses that are not legally sound or not in the public interest, and made recommendations for amendment of the bills accordingly.

The Committee believes that the bills in their proposed amended form as set out in Appendix 3 to this Report are legally sound, and that each of the proposed amendments contained in the bills in Appendix 3 would have a beneficial impact, as each of the proposed amendments is designed for the purpose of making the Constitution more Nauruan, enhancing transparency and accountability of public institutions, making the Constitution clearer and easier to understand, fixing some of the technical problems of the past, or enhancing democracy.

d) what needs to be inserted in the constitutional amendment bills by way of transitional provisions, based on the proposed final form of the bills as recommended by the Select Committee?

As stated in section B of Part 1 of this Report, the Committee recommends that the precise wording of the proposed transitional provisions be drafted during the Committee of the Whole stage, when it becomes apparent what the final content of the constitutional amendment bills will be. Nonetheless, it is possible for this Committee to make some observations about the type of transitional provisions that would be required if the recommendations of this Select Committee were to be adopted.

Transitional provisions will need to include the following:

- Providing for the survival of matters already listed in the Supreme Court, and for matters that have been filed in the Supreme Court but are still in the interlocutory phase, and for the authority of the Chief Justice to determine into which of the new Divisions of the Supreme Court such matters will be transferred;
- Providing for the continuation of the appointment of public officers who held office prior to the commencement of the constitutional amendments, notwithstanding that the provisions relating to their offices may have been amended, and providing that any change in the terms or functions of their appointment shall have prospective (not retrospective) effect;
- Provision to ensure that any person who acquires Nauruan citizenship on the commencement date of the constitutional amendments by virtue of the amendment of Article 72(1) may forfeit that citizenship if its acquisition would cause that person any disadvantage (for example, if the person is also a Fijian citizen and would automatically lose his Fijian citizenship upon acquiring another citizenship);
- Providing that any provision that vests new rights or entitlements in any person shall have prospective (not retrospective) effect, so for example, an action in the Supreme Court for breach of a new right under Part II, such as children's rights, can only be brought if the cause of action arose after the date of commencement of the constitutional amendments;

- Providing for the effect of new provisions that require implementing legislation (such as the Right to information, the Leadership Code, etc) during any period between the commencement date of the constitutional amendments and the commencement date of implementing legislation, and possibly prescribing a time limit for the passage of implementing legislation;

- Providing for the first election that will be held under the new provisions, and for specific commencement dates of any Articles that cannot feasibly commence until after the first election has been held under the new provisions (such as Article 21B, Article 24, Article 34, Article 61A and others);

- Providing for the effect of the constitutional amendments on any existing laws, including express provision for the repeal or amendment of particular laws that may be invalid by virtue of inconsistency with new or amended constitutional provisions; at the same time as providing for legal continuity in most matters after the commencement date of the constitutional amendments;

- Prescribing a date for the first period review under Article 84A, which should probably be fifteen years after the commencement date of the constitutional amendments;

- Providing for the commencement of the new and amended financial provisions, and clarifying that the requirements of the new provisions are prospective (not retrospective); and making similar provision for any other provision that imposes new duties or obligations upon any person.

The foregoing provides a summary of the Committee's findings and recommendations, which as stated at the beginning of this section, are detailed more fully in Appendices 1, 2 and 3 to this Report.

PREFACE

The Table of proposed constitutional amendments provides an overview of the existing provisions of the Constitution of Nauru, the recommendations made by the Nauru Constitutional Review Commission in its Report of 28 February 2007, opinions expressed by members of the public during the public consultation meetings held in 2006, the resolutions of the Nauru Constitutional Convention of May 2007, and the resolutions of the Select Committee on Constitutional Amendment Bills from January-March 2009.

In the first column, proposed new Articles are shaded in grey so they can be easily distinguished from existing Articles of the Constitution. In the column containing the Commission recommendations, reference is made to the relevant page numbers of the Commission Report on which the reasoning behind the recommendation and the recommendation itself can be found. In the column containing the Convention resolutions, reference is made to the relevant clause within the respective constitutional amendment Bill which reflects that resolution.

NOTE: in the column containing SCCA resolutions, if the SCCA resolved to adopt a recommendation of the Commission or a resolution of the Convention, but for very minor amendments to the wording (such as changing 'must' to 'shall' for consistency) those minor changes are not noted in the column (but are reflected in the text of Appendix 2); only changes to the substance or effect of a provision are noted.

The table does not contain the complete text of the existing provisions of the Constitution, nor the complete text of the proposed amendments, and is therefore not a substitute for the original documents which it summarises. The table is intended to provide an accessible overview of the origin and progress of each of the proposed amendments, but must be read together with the complete text of the Constitution of Nauru, the Commission Report, and the two constitutional amendment Bills (the Constitution of Nauru (Parliamentary Amendments) Bill 2008 and the Constitution of Nauru (Referendum Amendments) Bill 2008).

THE CONSTITUTION OF NAURU

~~WHEREAS~~ we the people of Nauru acknowledge God as the almighty and everlasting Lord and the giver of all good things:

~~And~~ Whereas we humbly place ourselves under the protection of His good providence and seek His blessing upon ourselves and upon our lives:

~~And~~ Whereas we have declared that Nauru shall be a republic:

~~And~~ Whereas a Constitutional Convention representing us has prepared a constitution for Nauru:

~~Now~~ Therefore we the people of Nauru in our Constitutional Convention this twenty-ninth day of January, One thousand nine hundred and sixty-eight, do hereby adopt, enact and give to ourselves this Constitution to come into force on the thirty-first day of January, One thousand nine hundred and sixty-eight.

PREAMBLE

WHEREAS Nauru became a sovereign independent Republic on the thirty-first day of January, 1968 under a Constitution adopted by a Constitutional Convention which held its final meeting on the seventeenth day of May 1968:

And WHEREAS after forty years, we have reviewed our independence Constitution, and a Constitutional Convention and Parliament representing us have prepared a revised Constitution for Nauru, we hereby introduce the Constitution as revised:

WE, THE PEOPLE OF NAURU, acknowledge God the almighty as the Creator and everlasting Lord and the giver of all good things. We humbly place ourselves under the protection of His good providence and pray for His blessing upon our beloved nation, ourselves, our lives and upon our land. We honour our history and declare our aspirations in this document, and acknowledge that our national motto is “God’s Will First”.

We proudly acknowledge and honour our ancestors, who made this beautiful and isolated island their home and built a friendly society based on amicable agreements. Nauru, our beloved island home, is the living link between all generations of Nauruans. On this island we have built our own unique society.

Nauru has faced and survived many challenges, including foreign rule and the impact of foreign cultures, the devastation of war, and the destruction of much of the natural beauty of our island. We have been blessed with vast phosphate resources, which we as a people have used with mixed outcomes. In the face of these challenges, our people have proven themselves to be resilient and adaptable.

We deeply respect and acknowledge the great leadership and achievements of our founding forefathers, who struggled for and won our independence, and enabled us to take our place, on equal terms, in the modern family of nations. We extend to other peoples and nations what we seek from them: peace, friendship, mutual understanding and respect for our common humanity and human dignity.

The Nauruan people expect honest and accountable government. We have reviewed our Constitution, striving to ensure that Nauru's future will be bright and that public institutions will serve the people with integrity.

The people of Nauru set out for themselves and for their governing institutions the following principles:

We strive for peace, justice, stability, welfare, progress and prosperity of the people;

Our institutions shall serve the people accountably and transparently and observe high ethical standards;

We affirm our commitment to democratic values and to the right of people to participate in their government;

We uphold respect for human dignity and the human rights of all people and affirm the protection of fundamental and inalienable rights under Part II of this Constitution;

We seek to preserve the value of resolving matters of importance by consensus or compromise and recognise the need for courtesy and respect;

We recognise the importance of communities and the strength and support of the family;

We uphold the importance of sharing within the extended family and the community;

We acknowledge and affirm the pride Nauruans have in their role as custodians of the land, and the importance of land to the Nauruan people. We acknowledge the importance of kinship and oral history in matters concerning land;

We value highly the knowledge and history handed down over generations;

We affirm the matrilineal basis of our society and take pride in our traditions, culture, heritage, aspirations, respect for family life, our 12 tribes, kinship, and the preservation and unity of the people;

We acknowledge the need to be open to adapt to changing circumstances in the modern world and to be open to the gradual development of changing values and priorities;

These principles, under the guidance of God, are solemnly adopted and affirmed as the basis of this Constitution, and as the guiding principles to be observed in its interpretation and application at all levels of government and organised life
AND WE DO HEREBY ADOPT, ENACT AND GIVE TO OURSELVES THIS AMENDED CONSTITUTION.

Appendix 3

Constitutional Amendment Bills incorporating all amendments proposed by Committee, with changes marked

Preface to Appendix 3

Appendix 3 to the Report of the Select Committee on Constitutional Amendment Bills contains the text of the Constitution of Nauru (Parliamentary Amendments) Bill 2008 and the Constitution of Nauru (Referendum Amendments Bill) 2008 as they were introduced to Parliament in November 2008 (with some minor errors that appeared in those Bills corrected without track changes – refer to errors noted in Appendix 1) and with the proposed amendments to the Bills as recommended by the Select Committee on Constitutional Amendment Bills marked in the text. Proposed deletions from the Bill are shown using strike-out (~~like this~~) and proposed additions to the Bills are underlined.

Please note:

- where entirely new clauses are proposed for the Bills, such clauses have been allocated a new number, in order that the clauses numbers of the original Bills are not changed in this document, and so that references to clause numbers that are made in Appendix 1 can still be used as a guide by anyone referring to particular clauses of the Bill in this Appendix.
- The proposed amendments shown in the Bills are not complete and the Bills would not be ready to pass in the form set out in this Appendix, as Parliament still needs to insert appropriate transitional provisions in the Bills and every detail contained in the Bills as amended needs to be thoroughly proof read before Parliament votes on the Bills in their final form.
- The changed highlighted reflect the recommended amendments in accordance with resolutions of the Select Committee on Constitutional Amendment Bills, but these proposals are yet to be debated and decided upon by the Committee of the Whole Parliament. This means that the proposed amendments that are highlighted have not yet been made, but are shown merely for the purpose of highlighting what would be changed in the Bills if the Committee of the Whole accepted all of the recommendations of the SCCA.

REPUBLIC OF NAURU

CONSTITUTION OF NAURU (PARLIAMENTARY AMENDMENTS) BILL 2008

A Bill for

AN ACT

[No. of 2009]

To amend The Constitution of Nauru 1968

[Certified:]

Enacted by the Parliament of Nauru as follows—

1. Short Title

This Act may be cited as the Constitution of Nauru (Parliamentary Amendments) Act 2009.

1A. Commencement

This Act will come into force, subject to the commencement conditions prescribed in sections [insert section numbers of transitional provisions] on the date it is certified by the Speaker in accordance with Articles 47 and 84 of the Constitution.

2. Constitution

In this Act The Constitution of Nauru 1968 is referred to as the Constitution.

3. Amendment of the Preamble

The Preamble to the Constitution, which begins with the words ‘Whereas we the people of Nauru’ and ends with the words ‘this Constitution to come into force on the thirty-first day of January, One thousand nine hundred and sixty-eight’ is deleted and replaced with the following words –

‘PREAMBLE

~~WE, THE PEOPLE OF NAURU, acknowledge God the almighty as the Creator and everlasting Lord and the giver of all good things. We humbly place ourselves under the protection of His good providence and pray for His blessing upon our beloved nation, ourselves, our lives and upon our land. We honour our history and declare our aspirations in this document, and acknowledge that our national motto is “God’s Will First”.~~

WHEREAS Nauru became a sovereign independent Republic on the thirty-first day of January, 1968 under a Constitution adopted by a Constitutional Convention which held its final meeting on the seventeenth day of May 1968;

And WHEREAS after forty years, we have reviewed our independence Constitution, and a Constitutional Convention and Parliament representing us ~~has~~ have prepared a revised Constitution for Nauru, ~~and~~ we hereby introduce Constitution as revised:

WE, THE PEOPLE OF NAURU, acknowledge God the almighty as the Creator and everlasting Lord and the giver of all good things. We humbly place ourselves under the protection of His good providence and pray for His blessing upon our beloved nation, ourselves, our lives and upon our land. We honour our history and declare our aspirations in this document, and acknowledge that our national motto is “God’s Will First”.

We proudly acknowledge and honour our ancestors, who made this beautiful and isolated island their home and built a friendly society based on amicable agreements. Nauru, our beloved island home, is the living link between all generations of Nauruans. On this island we have built our own unique society.

Nauru has faced and survived many challenges, including foreign rule and the impact of foreign cultures, the devastation of war, and the destruction of much of the natural beauty of our island. We have been blessed with vast phosphate resources, which we as a people have used with mixed outcomes. In the face of these challenges, our people have proven themselves to be resilient and adaptable.

We deeply respect and acknowledge the great leadership and achievements of our founding forefathers, who struggled for and won our independence, and enabled us to take our place, on equal terms, in the modern family of nations. We extend to other peoples and nations what we seek from them: peace, friendship, mutual understanding and respect for our common humanity and human dignity.

~~We acknowledge and affirm the pride of place Nauruans have in their own land, and the exclusive rights of indigenous land owners as custodians and beneficiaries of the land. We also acknowledge that we have been blessed with vast phosphate resources.~~

The Nauruan people expect honest and accountable government. We have reviewed our Constitution, striving to ensure that Nauru’s future will be bright and that public institutions will serve the people with integrity.

The people of Nauru set out for themselves and for their governing institutions the following principles:

We strive for peace, justice, stability, welfare, progress and prosperity of the people;

Our institutions shall serve the people accountably and transparently and observe high ethical standards;

We affirm our commitment to democratic values and to the right of people to participate in their government;

We uphold respect for human dignity and the human rights of all people and affirm the protection of fundamental and inalienable rights under Part II of this Constitution;

We seek to preserve the value of resolving matters of importance by consensus or compromise and recognise the need for courtesy and respect;

We recognise the importance of communities and the strength and support of the family;

We uphold the importance of sharing within the extended family and the community;

We acknowledge and affirm the pride Nauruans have in their role as custodians of the land, and the importance of land to the Nauruan people. We affirm the matrilineal basis of our society and acknowledge the importance of kinship and oral history in matters concerning land;

We value highly the knowledge and history handed down over generations;

We affirm the matrilineal basis of our society and take pride in our traditions, culture, heritage, aspirations, respect for family life, our 12 tribes, kinship, and the preservation and unity of the people;

We acknowledge the need to be open to adapt to changing circumstances in the modern world and to be open to the gradual development of changing values and priorities;

These principles, under the guidance of God, are solemnly adopted and affirmed as the basis of this Constitution, and as the guiding principles to be observed in its interpretation and application at all levels of government and organised life,

AND WE DO HEREBY ADOPT, ENACT AND GIVE TO OURSELVES THIS AMENDED CONSTITUTION TO COME INTO FORCE ON [date to be inserted when it is known].

4. Insertion of Article 2A

~~The Constitution is amended by inserting immediately after Article 2, the following new Article 2A —~~

Comment [P20]: Article 2A has become 'promotion of awareness of the Constitution' but appears in the referendum amendments bill because it is an amendment to Part I

~~(2.) Parliament may make provision for the proof and pleading of custom for any purpose, provided that Parliament shall submit any such proposed law to an open public consultation process prior to introducing such law to Parliament.’~~

2. Constitution

In this Act The Constitution of Nauru 1968 is referred to as the Constitution.

2A. Insertion of new Article 2A

The Constitution is amended by inserting immediately after Article 2, the following new Article 2A —

(2) A provision in this part binds natural and legal persons if, and to the extent that, it is applicable, taking into account the nature of the right and the duty imposed by the right.’

Comment [P26]: This was previously proposed Art 2E, contained in clause 8 of the Parliamentary Amendments Bill; the content has not changed, but it has been moved into the Referendum Amendments Bill because it involves Part II of the Constitution (which is listed in Schedule 5 as being a Part that requires referendum for any amendment)

Article 3 of the Constitution is repealed and replaced with the following new Article 3: amended by

- a) ~~deleting from the marginal note the word ‘preamble’ and inserting the words ‘right to equality’;~~

~~(4) A law is not inconsistent with clause (1), (2) or (3) on the ground that it:~~

Comment [P27]: The content of the proposed amendment to Article 3 is almost identical to what appeared in clause 3 of this Bill, except that the few words of the Commission recommendation on Article 3 that were rejected by the Convention have been approved by SCCA and reinserted here, and the format of clause 3 of the Bill has been changed to repeal and replacement, rather than amendment, so that it is easier to understand the content of the Bill because it contains the whole of what new Article 3 would look like (see below)

~~(a) imposes a retirement age on a person who is the holder of a public office;~~

~~(b) imposes on persons who are not citizens a disability or restriction, not imposed on citizens;~~

~~(c) imposes a restriction on a person on the grounds of their opinions or beliefs if those opinions or beliefs involve harm to others or the diminution of the rights or freedoms of others;~~
